ISSUED SEMI-WEEKLY. MASSILLON, OHIO, MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1901 XL—NO 30

TAGGART - CLARK.

Brilliant Wedding at St. Timothy's Church.

FOUR HUNDRED INVITATIONS.

The Marriage Followed by a Large Reception and Ball at the Massillon Club — The Bride a Charming Massillon Society Girl — The Groom First Assistant in St. Elizabeth's Hospital at Washington.

One of the most elaborate of the many large weddings which have occurred in Massillon during the past few years was that of Miss Cora E. Taggart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Taggart, and Dr. Charles Herman Clark, of Washington, which took place in St. Timothy's church on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, followed by a reception and ball at the Massillon club. The bridal party entered the church from the south vestibule. The four ushers, C. P. L. McLain, F. F. Taggart, Harry B Conrad and Dr. Fred Daniels, of Indianapolis, preceded the bridesmaids, Miss Caroline Clark, of Indianapolis, the groom's sister; Miss Mabel Dielhenn, Miss Florence Dangler, and Miss Ethel Eyman. They were followed by a page, Master Harold Taggart, the bride's youngest brother. The bride, with her father, was preceded by the matron of honor, her twin sister, Mrs. C. P. L. McLain. The groom with his best man, A. E. Offutt, of Washington, met the bride at the altar. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Cassius M. Roberts, rector of the church. The chancel was beautifully decorated with large clusters of American beauty roses and smilax Miss Marian Bartruff was the organist.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom received the congratulations of their friends in the reception room of the Massillon club which was tastefully trimmed with smilax and roses. The bride was charmingly gowned in white lace over taffeta silk. The bodice was high cut and was trimmed with lace and a garniture of pearls. Her veil, caught with orange blossoms, was thrown back from her face. She wore a magnificent diamond sunburst, the groom's wedding gift, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The matron of honor's gown was Paris muslin, made over a green taffeta silk. It was trimmed with lace and had a scarf of green liberty silk. Her bouquet was of white roses. The bridesmaids wore cream striped chiffon over cream silk, with scarfs of green liberty silk. They carried pink roses. Mrs. I. M. Taggart, the bride's mother, wore a handsome gown of black and white net over white silk. It was trimmed with cream lace and turquoise velvet. Mrs. George Chapman, formerly Miss Minnie Taggart, wore a white Persian lawn gown made over a white silk slip and trimmed with lace. Mrs. Harry Dielhenn, another sister of the bride, wore striped white chiffon over green silk, with trimmings of honiton lace. Mrs. F. F. Taggart's gown was a pink and green silk handsomely trimmed with lace.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the bride and groom opened the ball. From the first landing of the staircase leading to the second floor. Mrs. Clark threw her boquet to the waiting guests below. It was caught by Miss Florence Dangler. The ball room had been transformed into a bower of autumnal beauty by quanties of bright colored maple branches. The musicians' gallery was hidden behind masses of leaves. Green and white shades were used on the lights. Dancing continued until midnight. Supper was served at fifteen tables in the billiard room. The table at which the bridal party was served was heart shaped. It was lighted with candles under pink shades and had a centerpiece of large pink chrysanthemums. At each cover were favors in the form of pink rose baskets filled with heart shaped bon bons. The flowers on the other tables were pink and white carnations. The following menu was served:

Oyster patties,
Chicken salad,
Brown and white bread, Sandwiches,
Olives, Pickles,
Salted Almonds.
Ice Cream, Cake,
Coffee.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark left the club house at half past nine to prepare for their wedding journey. They took the 10:30 train east on the Pennsylvania railroad. The bride's traveling gown was a tailor suit of grayish blue basket cloth. The seams of the skirt were strapped with arrow shaped strips of the cloth stitched with gray. The coat was a blouse. Under it was worn a silk waist of dark blue trimmed with red. The hat matched the gown. It had a rather broad brim and was worn well forward over the face. Quills and a drapery of the cloth were its only trimmings.

Thebride's gifts to her maids and matron of honor were white lace fans. Dr. Clark presented the ushers and best man with gold bow-knot stick pins. Among the many handsome wedding presents was a large case containing small table silver, from the bride's brothers and sisters; a massive cut glass vase from the nurses at St. Elizabeth's hospital at Washington; a handsome piece of bronze statuary from A. E. Offutt, of Washington, and many valuable articles of silverware, bric a brac and paintings.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark will live in Washington. Dr. Clark is first assistant physician at St. Elizabeth's hospital for the insane where Dr. A. B. Richardson, formerly in charge of the Massillon state hospital, is superintendent. Dr. Clark also formerly occupied a position at the Massillon hospital. Mrs. Clark has been one of the prettiest and most popular girls in Massillon society. She and Mrs. C. P. L. McLain, her twin sister, are the youngest daughters of a large family.

Four hundred invitations were issued for the wedding. Among those present from out of town were: Mrs. George Chapman, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. George Storer and Miss Nettie Hammer, of Canal Fulton; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Neff, of Columbus; Miss Grace Gundry, of Baltimore; Dr. Fred Daniels and Miss Caroline Clark, of Indianapolis; Mr. A. E. Offutt, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jackson, of Akron; Mr. and Mrs. William Pettibone, Mr. D. Dennison, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. C. Starbird, of Norwalk; Mr. and Mrs. H. Walters, of Mansfield; Mrs. W. B. Emerson, of Milford, N. H.; Mr. Leo Dannemiller, Dr. and Mrs. Fraunfelter, of Canton.

COUNTY SEAT NEWS.

Opening Meeting of Republican Campaign Oct. 23.

Canton, Oct. 19.—The Republican campaign in Canton will be opened at the Tabernacle on Wednesday evening, October 23. The orators will be Congressman Robert W. Tayler and Hon. James J. Grant. It is planned to have a parade before the meeting, headed by Thayer's Military band. Arrangements are also being made by local Republicans to attend the Foraker meeting at Alliance Thursday evening, October 24. It is probable that an excursion train will be run.

Secretary Ryerson Ritchie, of the McKinley National Memorial Association, came to Canton from Cleveland Friday. He was in consultation with Hon. W. A. Lynch, who is a member of the executive committee of the board of trustees, on matters relative to the opening of the main offices in this city, and as to the management of the affairs of the association.

Work on the Canton, Massillon & Akron electric railroad near Canton was stopped Friday evening. This gives additional credence to the story that the Canton & Akron road has been sold to the N. O. T. Company, although local representatives still deny that the deal has been completed.

The county commissioners have awarded two contracts for repairs to the Canton Bridge Company. The company has been authorized to repair a bridge in Pike township, near Howensteine, for $885, and to repair a bridge near Waynesburg for $995. The commissioners were in Tuscarawas township Friday looking after contemplated improvements.

NOTES OF HOSPITAL

Trustee's Tribute to McKinley's Memory.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING.

The New Assembly Building Will Be Named McKinley Hall—It Will Be Ready for Dedication About the Last of November — Brief Personal Items.

The board of trustees of the Massillon state hospital held their regular monthly meeting at the institution on Thursday. At the September meeting, held the day following President McKinley's death, Superintendent Eyman was instructed to draw up a memorial and report at the next meeting. The following was therefore unanimously adopted at yesterday's meeting:

The tragic death of President McKinley by the hand of an assassin awakens the tenderest memories in the friends of the institution. From its inception President McKinley's influence was constantly extended in its favor. At the first meeting of the trustees appointed by him, and held in his office, President, then Governor McKinley, used these words: 'I have chosen you, gentlemen, to build this institution and desire you to make it the best of its kind.' Only a few weeks before his tragic death he expressed the liveliest interest in its progress and in a hope that ere long he would be free to give it special attention. True and noble man, honored and trusted above any other public official. His work is done. No marble or granite column is needed to prepetuate it, but we would have this institution, either in part or in full, bear the name of William McKinley."

The Massillon state hospital was begun when McKinley was governor in 1982, and he it was who appointed the first board of trustees. That board was composed of Dr. A. B. Richardson, Robert Sherrard, William Mullin, S. J. McMahon and Dr. N. C. Eyman, the present superintendent. Of the original board Mr. McMahon is now the only trustee. It was decided to name the new assembly hall William McKinley Hall. A marble tablet will be placed in the auditorium bearing the name.

The decorating and frescoing of the auditorium of the new assembly hall is completed. The predominant colors are red and buff. The most noticeable of the decorations is the great seal of Ohio painted in colors just above the stage. The figure is about three feet in diameter. The work of placing and fixing the stage scenery will be begun Monday. A new feature of these fixtures will be an asbestos curtain. In case of fire on the stage this curtain can be detached and thrown over the flames. Dr. Eyman says that the hall will be ready for dedication about the last of November.

Miss Mame Harrison, a nurse, is taking a vacation of a few months on account of ill health.

Miss McFadden, of Mt. Victory, has taken a position as nurse in the infirmary building, taking the place made vacant by the death of the late Miss Artie Otto.

Miss Grace Boone, stenographer, is enjoying a few days vacation at Salem.

Dr. C. P. Colver is spending a few days at Ann Arbor, Mich., visiting among old school friends.

Ray Markle, an attendant in the hospital building, has resigned his position.

MAYOR FOUND HIM OUT.

Dayton, Oct. 18.—When Mayor Poe ordered that the nickel-in-the-slot machines must go, the owners of the devices hid them away, hoping the time might come when they could again bring them out. The other day one saloonkeeper rigged a machine up in a cellar and he "boys" were allowed to spend their money on it. The mayor found him out, however, and served notice that the machine had to be closed or the owner go to jail. The machine was closed.

SOUTHERNERS MAD

"A WHITE MAN'S COUNTRY."

An Awful Rumpus Because the President Entertained Booker T. Washington, One of the Leading Educators of the Land, at the White House.

New Orleans, Oct. 19.—The action of President Roosevelt in receiving Prof. Booker T. Washington, of Tuskagee institute, at dinner, has aroused a violent storm here, and is making itself very much felt in politics. The New Orleans papers, with the exception of the Picayune, condemn the action of the President as an intended insult to the South that must be resented in some way. They regard it as a threat of social equality which they declare will overwhelm the very basis of society and civilization. This view is entertained by a majority of the whites.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19.—Three of the Richmond papers editorially condemn President Roosevelt for receiving Booker T. Washington on terms of social equality. The editorials reflect the general sentiment of the community. Last night a picture of Roosevelt was thrown on canvass at the theater and it was greeted with a storm of hisses. One of McKinley was as loudly cheered.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 19.—Under the caption of "A White Man's Country," the Commercial Appeal condemned the President for entertaining Booker T. Washington. The Scimitar also condemns him.

PLANS OF THE AMALGAMATED.

Unskilled Workmen Will Be Admitted to Membership.

Pittsburg, Oct. 19.—The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' of America is planning a general reorganization tending to strengthen itself after the losses accruing in membership due to the settlement. The national officers have come to the conclusion that the recent strike was lost largely by reason of the fact that the men in the inferior positions in the mills were able to take up the skillful work and filled the positions of the Amalgamated men. The new policy of the association will be to take in all the mill workers and make them part and parcel of the organization so that the interests of all will be identical. These changes will necessarily have to be deferred until the next annual convention of the Amalgamated Association next spring. In the meantime plans will be perfected for the additional membership by the executive board. Changes will be necessary in the constitution and bylaws before the unskilled workers and laborers in the mills are admitted to the Amalgamated Association.

MONUMENT DEDICATED.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—The first monument at Valley Forge, to the memory of the soldiers who died there in the winter of 1777 and 1778, was dedicated today by the Daughters of the Revolution. Houston, Tex., Oct. 19.—At 2:30 this morning fire started in the Hutchins House, a four-story hotel covering half a block. All within the walls was burned. All the guests escaped, except one unknown man, who was seen to fall back into the flames. Loss $250,000.

HANNA WILL SPEAK.

Monarch over pain. Burns, cuts sprains, stings, instant relief. Dr Thomas' Electric Oil. At any drug store.

SHIP SUBSIDY LEGISLATION.

Washington, Oct. 19.—There will probably be two new ship subsidy bills when congress convenes. That Senator Frye has spent a considerable part of his vacation repairing the one under fire last winter is well known. Today it was developed that Representative Stevens, of Minnesota, also has a bill, which he will introduce if the concessions made by Senator Frye are not satisfactory. Representative Minor, of Wisconsin, who called at the White House, said so. The statesmen mentioned represent the parties who are fighting for advantage. The Frye bill will represent the interests which desire subsidies for fast passenger vessel. The Stevens bill embodies the views of those who think slow-going cargo ships which carry the American goods, but no passengers, should receive the benefits of government aid. The former group embraces the Pennsylvania Company and the International Navigation Company. J. J. Hill and his interests are served in the Stevens bill. Representative Minor last winter combined the Northwestern Republicans in opposition to the bill championed by Senator Frye and Hanna. He compelled them to amend the bill so as to exclude the tank ships of the Standard Oil Company from the benefit law and to admit cargo ships of speed as low as ten knots to the benefits. He also compelled a reduction of the rates given to the four fast ships of the American line owned by the International Navigation Company. If Senator Frye's new bill gives what Minor thinks is due the freight carriers the Stevens bill will not be introduced, but he does not expect the Maine senator to introduce a satisfactory bill. Mr. Minor told the President yesterday that the farmers of the Northwest would stand for a subsidy bill that would encourage the exportation of their products, but would cretainly revolt against any other kind. Because of this division in the party on that subject the President's endorsement of the subsidy scheme will be in general instead of specific terms.

Cardinal Gibbons will be received by President Roosevelt on October 26. Rev. D. J. Stafford, pastor of the St. Patrick's church, this city, called on the President yesterday and made the engagement for his eminence. This will be the first occasion upon which Mr. Roosevelt will have received so high a representative of the Catholic church. The President said he would be glad to receive such an eminent and patriotic American as is the cardinal.

TO BAR AMERICANS.

London, Oct. 19.—The Indian Secretary, Lord George Hamilton, and the Viceroy of India, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, have made arrangements for a conference of Indian railroad engineers at Calcutta, in December, to consider a standardization of locomotives, such as exists in the United States. The primary object is to help the British manufacturers and prevent future railroad contracts from different parts of the empire going to foreign firms. British makers of locomotives claim that if the American method of using standard types could be introduced in India and South Africa it would enable them to expand their powers of production to meet increasing demands and fill orders which are now going to the United States and Germany.

NATIONAL CHARACTER

Necessary for Success of Young Men's Society.

The Rev. Father J. F. Kuebler, of St. Joseph's church, speaking of the proposed association for the young men of Massillon, said:

"I favor the organization of an association for the amusement of our young men, but I do not favor an association based on any religious principles. There are too many different churches with different creeds that we would not know what character to assume. Of course it should be conducted on a moral principle but it would not be practical in a religious character. In my own church a few years ago we organized a Young Men's Catholic Association for the amusement of, and the moral elevation of the young men. It was successful for a while but it soon collapsed. For an organization of any kind to live it must be of a national character. The trouble with these local organizations is that the young fellows soon lose interest and it gradually dies out. I should like to have presented to us some certain and lasting device by means of which our young men could be brought into such an organization and kept there for many years, but I guess you find a great many others who are like myself, at a loss to know how it can be done."

It is with infinite regret that The Independent records the death of J. P. Yockey, one of Canal Fulton's best known and most respected citizens. Elsewhere will be found a sketch of his career. It shows that Mr. Yockey lived a life of constant and mutifarious usefulness and was at all times a conscientious and intelligent member of the community in which he lived.

The qualifications of J. Loyal Snyder, Republican candidate for the office of treasurer of Stark county cannot fail to appeal to the best judgment of conservative voters. Having served in the capacity of deputy treasurer for the past four years, Mr. Snyder is thoroughly well known to the taxpayers of this vicinity who are familiar with his unfailing courtesy and his painstaking regard for their interests.

Austin A. Hay, of Beach City, Republican candidate for county commissioner, is one of the best known and most respected merchants in Stark county. The principles upon which he conducts his private business are fairness and honesty. He is a man who can be trusted and is therefore a man to be elected. The Independent stands for Mr. Hay as it expects the voters of Stark county to stand by him in November.

Henry Clews weekly financial review issued today shows that home trade is in eminently sound condition. "There has been no over expansion of credits," he says, "or buying in general business, and our merchants have certainly not been swept off their feet in the wave of speculation which surged through Wall street some months ago. This was shown by the steadiness with which the shock from President McKinley's death was received in business circles, where no such defensive arrangements were possible as those carried through by New York bankers. The iron trade continues to show extraordinary prosperity, and there are a number of industries that could relinquish a goodly share of present profits and yet be doing handsomely. It is both unreasonable to expect the boom of 1900 to continue indefinitely, and moderate reactions will tend to prolong and not shorten our prosperity."

KEYNOTE AND CORNER STONE

With a degree of unanimity that would be surprising if its purpose were not so obvious the newspaper advocates of free trade, tariff revision and a wide open home market for the sake of a larger foreign trade are declaring that reciprocity was the keynote of President McKinley's Buffalo speech. In support of this view they are reprinting carefully selected extracts, taking pains to omit those portions of the speech which qualify and explain the late President's views regarding the kind of commercial treaties that we should enter into with foreign countries. They are apparently actuated by a common impulse of suppression, for they persistently refuse to inform their readers that in the speech at Buffalo the President's parting words to the American people dwelt upon the care which should be exercised in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements in order that "domestic production shall not be curtailed." This proviso was emphasized over and over again in the Buffalo speech, but you would never suspect it if your sources of information were limited to the editorial columns of free trade, revisionary and reciprocatory newspapers. Protection to American labor and industry was the keynote of the President's Buffalo speech. William McKinley died as he had lived, in the unaltered conviction that protection was the cornerstone of American prosperity and progress. —American Economist.

FACTS ABOUT CUBA.

The island of Cuba is a gigantic farm of 28,000,000 acres of marvelously fertile soil. Thirteen million acres remain as virgin forest. Her present population is a little above one and a half millions. Were Cuba as densely populated as Massachusetts, her census would show 11,000,000 inhabitants. An equal density with that of England would give her upwards of 22,000,000. Her ability to support a population per square mile equivalent to that of England, so large a per centage of which is dependent upon manufacturing interests, is somewhat doubtful, from the fact that Cuba presents little or no possibility of ever becoming a manufacturing center. In a measure, the comparison with Masachusetts is also faulty, for the same reason. Yet, in the latter case, the vastly greater fertility of Cuban soil would offset the manufacturing feature and there is little doubt that Cuba, along the line of her particular agricultural advantages, can provide a comfortable and reasonably profitable living for a population of 10,000,000 of moderately industrious citizens.

THE SUPPRESSION OF ANARCHY

Representative Dalzell, of Pittsburg, who, as second member of the ways and means committee, ranks next to Chairman Payne, of New York, as leader of the Republican majority and has thus much to do with legislation, has given out the following imporant statement regarding the leading questions likely to come before congress this winter:

"The very first matter brought before congress at its meeting will be a number of bills having their inspiration in the assassination of President McKinley. They will be of two kinds, one looking to provision for the protection of the President against assaults, and the other to the suppression of Anarchists. So far as the first is concerned, it seems to me that there should be no difficulty in passing a law to make an attempt upon the life of the President, or anyone in immediate succession to the Presidency, a felony punishable by death, and triable in the federal courts. I know, of course, that the objection is urged that if the President departs from the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia he becomes subject to state laws, but it is conceded that it is competent for congress to protect federal officers by federal laws anywhere while in the exercise of their official duties. It seems impossible to me that a President can be held not to be in the exercise of his functions wherever he may be in the United States and under whatever circumstances. His office goes with him wherever he may be. The United States supreme court held in the case of the deputy marshal who killed the assailant of Justice Field that the chambers of the judge were wherever the judge was at the time. So it seems to me entirely competent to protect the President by federal law wherever he may be in the United States.

"The second class of measures, looking to the suppression of anarchy, will afford many difficulties. The treasury department should be able to give to congress a great deal of information, so far as amendments to immigration laws are concerned, to prevent the immigration of persons of a dangerous character. The question of deportation is another and more difficult one. Without closer study than I have been able to give it, I could not express any definite views upon it. I have no doubt that under the prevailing excitement extreme and radical suggestions will be made with respect to what is generally known as 'yellow journalism.' It is a dangerous matter to undertake to restrict in any way that liberty of the press guaranteed by the constitution. My judgment is that if the laws already in force were properly administered, much of the so-called liberty, but real license, of the press might be restricted, but, after all, the remedy for that sort of thing lies with the public, and depends upon the public education. The sensational newspapers of the day merely answer to a popular demand. If that were withdrawn, the evil would, to a great extent, be remedied.

LAST DAYS OF CZOLGOSZ.

Only Guards and Clergymen Allowed to See Him.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Czolgosz, the assassin, who must die under the laws of New York state within the week beginning October 28, will pass the remainder of his days on earth in a monotonous manner. He occupies the fifth cell in "murderers' row" in Auburn state prison. There were four condemned men in the row when Czolgosz arrived, and he took the only remaining cell. Despite the fact that he is he last one sentenced, and to reach the prison where his closing days are to be spent, his execution is ordered to take place the first.

When the grated door was closed on Czolgosz on September 27 it signaled the fact that the condemned would never leave the cell until such time as the officers of the law, charged with putting him to death, by electricity, should take him to the execution chamber. There are two guards on duty constantly in the corridor on which the five cells face. These cells are in the basement, in the southern wing, and removed from the general cells. Czolgosz's incarceration in the condemned cell precludes his seeing any one save the guard, members of his immediate family, and a clergyman. These persons have access to the corridor as often as they see fit to call, or as often as Czolgosz may desire. The rules of the prison department allow the condemned to eat whatever he may see fit to order, and on the day of execution he may have a new suit of black. Many criticize adversely the giving of the assassin the right to select luxuries, feeling that he should be kept alive on the plainest diet. If he should choose to order birds and fancy dishes, it will be the duty of the warden to provide them.

The putting to death of Czolgosz for the terrible crime he committed will be the same as that of any other condemned man in a capital case. On the morning of his electrocution, which will propably be October 28, Czolgosz will be given his breakfast, will don a new suit of clothes, and then be permitted to have a meeting with his spiritual adviser. The witnesses to the carrying out of the law's mandate and the official surgeons will asemble in the chamber which contains the electric chair. The condemned, when he and his spiritual adviser have finished their devotions, will be marched from his cell with the clergyman, and surrounded by guards, headed by the warden, will proceed to the room where the witnesses are assembled. The strapping of the condemned into the chair and applying the electrodes to his arms and legs and the adjusting of the fatal electric cap will be the work of but a few minutes. Then a minute inspection will be made to see that everything is properly adjusted. The order to apply the current will follow, and in an instant death should result. To make death doubly sure, a second application of the current is always made. The doctors then examine the executed man and next perform an autopsy on the body.

MURDER AT NEW PHILADELPHIA

Woman with Head Crushed Found in Cornfield.

New Philadelphia, Oct. 17.—Wednesday afternoon two young boys who were passing through a cornfield on Third street found the dead body of Mrs. Joshua Hensel. The body was removed to McElroy & Linn's undertaking rooms, where an inquest was held by the coroner. The head and face of the deceased had been beaten into a jelly. Two fractures of the skull and a deep gash in the forehead were found. Mrs. Hensel had been seen at about 6 o'clock Tuesday night at her home, and not after that till found dead. She was about forty-two years old. As yet there is no clew to the perpetrator of the deed, and no motive advanced for the commission of the cirme. It was not for robbery, as $60 was found on her person. Mrs. Hensel was married to Mr. Hensel about a year ago. Her name had been Hochstetler, and her former husband is living. She has two sons, one in the saloon business at Valley Junction, and the other supposed to be on the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad.

THE BEAUTIFUL DOLOMITES.

Villagers in the Southern Tyrol Resent the Presence of Strangers, Although Much Distress Would Result if no Tourists Came — Grudging Politeness to the Foreign Invader.

Toblach, Southern Tyrol, Sept. 13.—Some twenty years ago Miss Amelia B. Edwards journeyed through the Dolomites behind post horses, over an excellent macadamized road, and subsequently wrote a book describing her adventures, entitled, "Untrodden Peaks and Unfrequented Valleys." It is one of the books printed by the useful Tauchnitz, whose publications in English are sold everywhere upon the Continent, and a great many Americans and English people buy and read it. Now, if there is one thing above all others which the tourist abroad desires to do, it is to discover untrodden peaks and unfrequented valleys, and consequently they come to the Dolomites by the thousands, all fired by the same ambition. We all learn sooner or later that there are no unfrequented valleys much less remote than Thibet, and doubtless Baedeker will soon issue a handbook for that country, giving the altiude of each village, and the cost of R. L. & A. for every hotel.

A choice of two very comfortable routes to the Dolomites is open to the traveller today. He may go by rail from Venice to Belluno, and thence by high road to Cortina and Toblach, or, as we did, he may reach Toblach by rail from Franzenfeste, a ride that is well worth taking, and then go south from Toblach. The arch-enemy to this delightful excursion is the man who sells circular railroad tickets. A circular railroad ticket possesses the very solid advantage of costing just 25 per cent less than tickets bought from station to station, and if one knows exactly what one wants to do, covering the ground from Paris back to Paris, for instance, it is a very satisfactory sort of a ticket. The trouble is that delightful opportunities to vary the chosen track are certain to present themselves after this ticket has been purchased, and these charming variations are exactly what the circular ticket man, six hundred miles away, knows nothing about. He has spread a gigantic cobweb of radiating tracks over Europe, and can trace a route thereon with a blue pencil well enough, but when a departure from his conventional pathways is suggetsed, he fails completely and perhaps even doubts whether any other exists. Personally, I have come to the conclusion that it is unprofitable to discuss the practical questions of travel with anything more animated than a red guide-book and an official printed time card. The personages in uniform are as automatic and limited in their area of intelligence as a cash register. All that one who knows what he wishes need do, is to lay down the price of a ticket mentioned in the guide-book, seek the train named in the time table, and get out when the name of his destination is seen on the walls of the station.

We reached Toblach one fine evening and sought the Schwartzen Adler. A most entertaining German off on his holiday had assured us that this particular Adler was especially beloved of his countrymen. There was a little garden in which the meals were served, fields of ripening flax all about us, and mountains that excited enthusiasm near by. Alas! To what an extent is travel a succession of episodes at wayside inns. Cervantes dared to speak of "ruddy Phoebus rising in the East," but in our time we hesitate to permit our souls to expand, and we write about hotels.

I am convinced that if cleanliness is next to godliness, the solid citizens of Toblach will be translated into the happier world without a word of question. Every evening at sunset the good fraus, having rubbed, scrubbed and whitewashed their own houses, cows and trees, came out and swept the road in front of their own houses. It seemed to me a practical way of meeting the street cleaning problem which concerns many cities. It has the merit of being effective. The only signs of wear and tear visible in Toblach were those caused by frequent scrubbing. In our hotel there were three ladies of a certain age, with very red, shiny cheeks, and who wore white frilled caps and wooden-soled shoes, whose mission in life was to dog the footsteps of lodgers, and begin to scrub without the slightest provocation. Mein Herr Baumgartner, the "besitzer" of the "Adler" had also a "handlung" where he sold everything from postal cards to new china, made old, as the fraulein in charge honestly explained, by being buried in the earth a proper length of time. The "besitzer" had succeeded by right of purchase to a long line of knights in armor and ladies in velvet, whose portraits hung upon his walls, and contributed to the picturesqueness of the scene. The meals were never served without the formally expressed hope that our digestion might be good, and upon retiring it was not displeasing to hear, "Sleep well, worthy master."

The villagers here and hereabouts were far less punctilious, and I was told that they rather resented the presence of so many strangers. An acquaintance had occasion to discuss the subject with the parish priest. He spoke of the commercial value of the tourists to the country, and drew a picture of the distress that would result if no tourists came. But, said the good man: "Our people got along very well in the olden time, when there were no railroads and no tourists, and they would again. We accept your money, but we do not want it. We wish to be left alone in our mountains. You bring irreverence to us, you treat lightly the most that we consider sacred; you pry into our affairs, and look upon us as curiosities, created for your distraction. No amount of prosperity brought in by you could wipe out this antipathy among our people."

I imagine that the priest was right, for in the South Tyrol the peasant class are grudgingly polite to the stranger. The German farmers of the north bow low to the foreign invader. Cheerful "Good mornings" are exchanged, and a friendly footing is much more readily established than in the South Tyrol. Here, the ceremonious "Good morning" is more often than not a curt "morgen," or, if the form of salutation be "Gets gut" (go thou well), it degenerates into a surly "gut."

On Sunday morning the "Graf" or count, came in state to attend high mass, and so did many of the fashionable folk from the hotels. The peasants stood in a crowd before the church door as the carriages arrived. When the "Graf's" equipage rolled up, and his footman descended, hats came off. There was a panic, in the frantic endeavor of all present to aid him when he dropped some trifle, and a passage to the door suddenly formed itself. When the other carriages discharged their passengers, containing many people I dare say a great deal more important than the Graf, no hats came off, and the scene was eyed with stolid curiosity only. The peasant still dearly loves a lord. This particular Graf owns most of the land in the valley immediately surrounding us, and it has been parcelled out from time immemorial in patches of two or three acres, which are leased to the actual farmers, and as these individual holdings are in few cases extensive enough to assure a living, the deficit is made good by sundry days' labor performed on the Graf's own estate. The spirit of the feudal system seems to be as strong as ever.

Great excitement has prevailed in this mountain country, since the introduction, a short time ago, of an automobile diligence, which plies between Toblach and Cortina. We engaged seats in this vehicle in advance, and offered payment therefor to a blond person, who refused it because the "gracious lord and master" was not then present to issue the tickets, and we were instructed to come the following day at 4 p. m. to receive them. We humbly and submissively presented ourselves the next day at 4:30 p. m. and learned to our confusion that the seats had been sold to another "Graf" who had telegraphed and who is evidently a mighty man in these parts. We protested, but the commander of the automobile was firm. He said: "You were to be here at 4 o'clock to take your tickets but you were not here, and therefore they have been sold." Reasoning with this peasant was out of the question, and anger impotent, so we went our way, and booked our places in the ordinary mail-post. We crawled at a snail's pace to Schluderbach, where resort to pedestrianism offered more speedy progress. The Tyrolean driver is not in favor of rapid transit, and his horses usually walk. We passed the diligence, still on its way to Cortina, and made an ascent 2100 feet by the lake of Misurina and the pass of Tre Coci. The driver looked at us sympathetically when we passed him, but the spirit of competition did not induce him to urge his horses from their accustomed walk. It was an inspiriting climb, up and down again, and the five hours slipped away rapidly.

At Tre Croci the Dolomites appeared, offering a vast and imposing panorama; the giant rocks, dazzling masses of pink and grey, with patches of snow here and there, stood straight and sheer before us, and we descended again into the rich valley by a narrow road, with fields of new mown hay. At Cortina, when the joy of the morning walk had somewhat subsided, we began to pay the price of experience, for during those five hours the sun had been shining, and a breeze from the glaciers blowing. With burning faces and parched and swelled lips, we recalled that stolid driver and those slow-going horses and were reminded of the faces seen of Alpine climbers suffering from acute forms of sunburn. Happily our own experience proved to be not serious. But it curbed that ambition of which experienced pedestrians are seldom guilty.

At Cortina di Ampezzo, the promise of Tre Croci pass was more than realized. Its normal population of perhaps two thousand was swelled to certainly five, by the summer boarders, and the main street was gay with arriving and departing diligences and carriages. We found the town quite hemmed in with walls of rock. The high-road twists off to the southward toward Belluna and Pieve di Cadore. At the latter place Titian was born. At sunset everybody in Cortina who could came out. Those who were there for the first time went into rhapsodies over the scene before them, but the habitues of the place only smiled, and never ceased to look. Those who can recall a sunrise from the Alhambra, looking towards the last view of the Moors, or a sunset on the Jungfrau, followed by the after-glow, will understand the measure of the feast in beauty in store for them at Cortina, if not the variety; for these scenes differ one from another as day from night. The glory of the Dolomites is their wealth of colors, that meet and blend and fade away, as they do in Titian's pictures.

A school of geologists, now somewhat limited in numbers, professes to believe that the Dolomite mountains were built up by some form of animal life, much as some of the coral rocks and reefs of the ocean. Few serious men so believe today, but the formation still puzzles them a great deal, for they find the stratum of magnesium overlaid by granite, a reversal of the natural order.

It was exhilarating, on the morning of our departure from Cortina, to see the mail-coaches and post-carriages start off, and the comfort of the drive was in no wise diminished by the occasional sight of pedestrians, usually armed with a long geologist's pick, struggling under haversacks filled with cumbersome belongings. Probably if we had had bicycles, we should not have returned to Toblach, but, following the splendid high-road, we should have continued down to Venice. I know of no bicycle excursion in the world that promises more pleasure with less exertion than the journey from Toblach to Venice. With the exception of a few miles of very easy climbing, the road slopes gently to the Adriatic, and is as smooth as a billiard table throughout its length.

Trials of a Lecturer.

A well known English woman lecturer tells these stories at her own expense:

"I was," she says, "on a tour through the provinces, and one night as I appeared on the platform in a small town the chairman introduced me to my audience in the following way: 'You have heard of Mr. Gladstone, the Grand Old Man. Let me now introduce to you the grand old woman.' This was intended as a sincere compliment.

"On another occasion a bluff old farmer, who boasted of his ability to look on all sides of a question, announced me as follows: 'This lady's come here to talk about her rights,' he said. 'She's hired the hall, and so she's got a right to be here, and if any of you don't like what she's got to say you've got an equal right to walk out in the middle on't.'"

The Mississippi.

Before the coming of the whites to America the Mississippi river was known by a different name every few miles of its course. Each tribe that dwelt along its banks gave it a name, and more than thirty of these local designations are preserved in the narratives of the early travelers.

A LONG-LIVED RACE.

Miss Hazel Cormany and Her Six Grandmothers.

Hazel, the six-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry M. Cormany, of 235 Wellman street, can well feel proud to coo and prattle in the presence of six grandmothers. A few days ago Miss Hazel sat in a local photographer's gallery surrounded by two grandmothers, Mrs. Mary Cormany and Mrs. Anna From, and four great-grandmothers, Mrs. Rebecca Shick, Mrs. Archie Bailey, Mrs. Mary A. From and Mrs. Sarah Bordner. The ancestors of baby Cormany, as far back as memory records, has been noted as a long lived race, several having reached the age of four score and ten. It is a remarkable fact that Miss Hazel has six grandmothers, and many old people say that they have never known of a similar case. It is thought that this child is the only one in the state that can claim such a maternal line.

The four great grandmothers are all American born and the child inherits the blood and the true spirit of the American woman. Mrs. Bailey is now in her 85th year and is yet active and in good health. She makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Jeremiah Cormany, east of the city. Mrs. Shick is 81 years of age. Her home is in New Berlin. Mrs. From, aged 63 years, and Mrs. Bordner, aged 70 years, reside near Reedurban. They are in good health and promise to see their great-granddaughter grow to womanhood. Another singular incident noticed in this group was that Mrs. Bailey alone has gray hair.

Coaling a British Visitor.

A big British battleship coming here to attend a patriotic function of some kind on the invitation of our government ran short of coal, and Uncle Sam, as host, agreed to fill her bunkers free of charge. This courtesy was done through the medium of a Jersey City merchant, who supplied fine furnace coal, worth from $6 to $7 a ton and presented his bill to the English captain. "Send it to the navy department," said the latter, and to Washington it went, to be returned by the next mail with a memorandum attached saying that an error had been made in the charge, "the government contract calling for coal at $3 a ton." And that is all the smart Jerseyite ever received.—New York Press.

A Few Observations Regarding Taxes:

Taxes are now due.

First half payable between October 1 and December 20.

Last half payable between April 1 and June 20

Taxes become a lien on property the day preceding the second Monday of April.

After July 20 those owing June taxes are delinquent

All delinquent taxes must be paid before December 20, otherwise the property will be advertised, and the third Tuesday of January, be sold for taxes.

After becoming delinquent, the penalty on Real Estate is 15 per cent.; on delinquent Personal Tax the penalty is 10 per cent. These penalties do not belong to the Treasurer, and therefore cannot be remitted.

After tax sale, the penalty the first year to tax title purchases is 15 per cent, plus 6 per cent interest; the second year the penalty is 25 per cent., plus 6 per cent. interest. If not redeemed within two years the property goes to the tax title purchaser

Taxpayers have option of paying full year's taxes during December collection period, but are required to pay first half with delinquencies. The remaining half should be paid within June collection.

The tax year and calendar year are not the same. The first half of any year's tax is due and payable October 1, and until December 20. The second half is payable up to June 20 of the following year

Many taxpayers have formed the habit of paying the December tax and the preceding June tax together thinking they are paying the full year's tax. All such are paying the last half of one year's tax and the first half of the following year's tax and consequently they are paying 15 per cent penalty on the preceding June tax. The proper way to pay a full year's tax without penalty, is to pay in December for December and June.

Dog Tax and Road Tax are paid in full at the December collection each year. Therefore get the December rate add the road to the whole rate and take half. To get the June rate subtract the road rate from the full rate and take half. To get the December payment multiply the valuation by the December rate, adding one dollar for each male dog assessed and two dollars for each female dog.

Checks given in payment of taxes do not liquidate the county's claim until honored at the bank. When checks are not paid on presentation, the taxes for which the checks were given will be reopened without notice to person giving such checks.

When paying taxes, present your last receipt, as it assists very much in locating your property and tends to avoid error

When you ask by mail for the amount of your taxes, designate your property clearly. State name in which the property is listed, name the township and section. If in city, give city, ward and lot number

The tax duplicates give the property in the name in which it stood the day preceding the second Monday of April of the year for which the taxes are levied. So that any transfer made on or after the second Monday of April of any year will not appear on the tax duplicate until the next year

The Treasurer's Office will be open between the hours of 8:00 a. m. and 4:00 p. m. from the 1st day of October to the 20th day of December, and from the first day of April to the 20th day of June, for the purpose of receiving taxes charged on the tax duplicate.

To insure prompt answer, all inquiries made by mail concering taxes should be forwarded prior to December 10 and June 10. While every effort will be made to accommodate the public, taxpayers are urgently requested to call early and pay their taxes and thus save themselves, as well as the Treasurer, the disagreeable rush at the end of the season.

Treasurer's Office, Canton, O., October 1, 1901.

J. P. YOCKEY DEAD.

Fulton Editor, Postmaster and Leading Citizen.

TYPHOID FEVER CAUSED DEATH.

Was Born in Lawrence Township, and Had Lived There Practically His Entire Life—Was Editor of the Weekly Signal for Twenty-six Years.

Canal Fulton, Oct. 19.—John P. Yockey, postmaster, editor and proprietor of the Canal Fulton Signal, president of the board of education, ex-township clerk, president of the Buckeye State Press Association, and leading citizen generally, died at his home here at 10 o'clock this morning, of typhoid fever, after an illness of ten days. Mr. Yockey was well known in Massillon. He was a widower, and leaves one daughter, Miss Lelia Joy Yockey, who for several years had been his assistant both in the postoffice and the newspaper business. It is probable that Miss Yockey will continue the publication of the paper, and citizens of this place will endeavor to have her appointed postmistress.

Mr. Yockey was 55 years old, a native of this township and a son of the late Philip Yockey. He became an orphan when seven years old. For five years he lived with relatives, receiving meager educational advantages. At 14 he began working on a farm for wages. By strict economy he saved enough money to enable him to enter Smithville Academy, near Wooster, when 19. He studied here for three years, teaching school during the winter. In 1688 Mr. Yockey became superintendent of the Canal Fulton schools. Afterwards he held similar position at Doylestown. In 1875 he purchased the Canal Fulton Herald, changing its name to the Signal, and conducted the paper continuously and successfully from that time.

The marriage of Mr. Yockey to Miss Arabella Porter, daughter of John Porter, of this township, took place September 20, 1877. The death of Mrs. Yockey occurred several years ago. The deceased was a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics and of the Knights of Honor. Mr. Yockey was appointed postmaster by the late President McKinley.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 1 o'clock and at the Presbyterian church at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The Rev. Mr. Elliott will officiate.

OBITUARY.

ELIZABETH BRANT ADAMS.

Elizabeth Brant Adams died at the home of her son, the Rev. W. S. Adams, at the Reformed parsonage west of the city, at 5:30 o'clock Friday morning. The deceased had been in failing health for some time but only a few days before her death did her condition become serious. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death. She was 72 years of age. She was a native of Cumberland county, Pa. When nine years of age she moved with her parents to Wayne county, O. Mrs. Adams was the mother of five children, three sons and two daughters, all of whom survive her. A brief service, conducted by Rev. O. P. Foust, will be held at the Reformed parsonage at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. The body will then be taken to Reedsburg for burial Sunday afternoon.

DR. H. W. McMILLEN.

Dr. Howard W. McMillen, aged 55, a prominent physician of Orrville, died at his home at that place Tuesday evening. Death was caused by heart failure. Dr. McMillen was well known in Massillon. For many years he practiced medicine in West Lebanon.

JOSEPH CULBERSON.

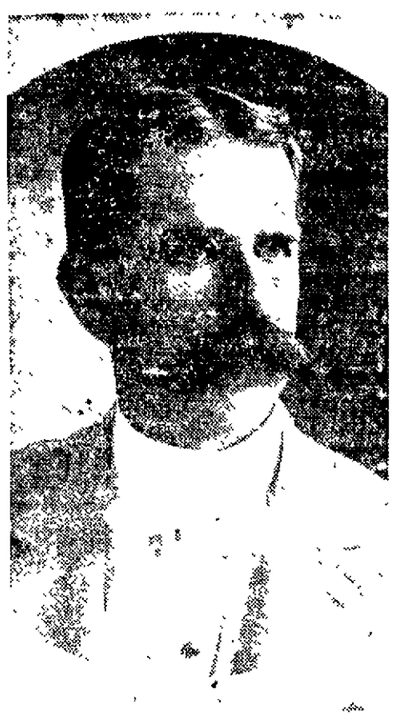
NEW SURGEON GENERAL.

McKinley's Physician to Be Head of Navy Doctors.

President Roosevelt has just announced his intention of appointing Dr. Presley Marion Rixey to the important position of surgeon general of the United States navy. Dr. Rixey's name has become sadly familiar during the past few weeks to the American people as that of the family physician of Mr. and Mrs. McKinley. He was an important member of the large staff of medical men who strove to save the president's life. Since the death of Mr. McKinley he has devoted his best efforts to the welfare of Mrs. McKinley.



DR. PRESLEY MARION RIXEY.

Dr. Rixey's promotion to the position of surgeon general will not take place until Dec. 18 at the earliest, as the four years' term of the present incumbent, Dr. Van Reypen, will not expire until then. The promotion will be a great step for Dr. Rixey, as the office of surgeon general carries with it the title and rank of a rear admiral. Dr. Rixey is now only a medical inspector, with the rank of commander. He will advance over the heads of more than twenty medical directors and medical inspectors who are now senior to him.

It has been known for some time that President McKinley intended to appoint Dr. Rixey surgeon general in recognition of his services and fitness.

Dr. Rixey is a Virginian by birth and is a courteous and chivalrous southern gentleman. He is a member of an excellent family. His brother, John Franklin Rixey, represents the Eighth Virginia district in congress. Dr. Rixey is now about 50 years old and has been in the naval service since 1874. He holds the office of director of the naval dispensary at Washington. He has served on various ships in different parts of the United States as well as on the European station.

FIELD'S DAUGHTER TO WED

The Poet's Firstborn Becomes a Bride This Month.

Miss Mary French Field, whose marriage to William C. Engler has been set for Oct. 16, is the eldest daughter of the late Eugene Field and will by a strange coincidence be married on the same day of the same month that her mother became the wife of the poet.

Miss Field, although scarcely more than twenty years old, is well known as a reader of her father's works, and the sympathetic way in which she has rendered them has added not a little to their popularity. She is a great favorite in the society of Buena Park, Chicago, where she has lived with her mother and sisters ever since the death of Mr. Field. Miss Field is tall and a decided blond. She is singularly gifted for her work as an elocutionist.

MARY FRENCH FIELD.

Her fiance, Mr. Engler, is a Maryland man, who for some years has made Chicago his home. Despite a disinclination for society and a retiring disposition he has won for himself a host of friends in the Windy City and has been the recipient of many and sincere congratulations on his good fortune in winning Miss Field for his bride.

The following case is but one of many similar occurring daily in Massillon. It is an easy matter to verify its correctness. Surely you cannot ask for better proof than such conclusive evidence.
